

Action Book Club

Join us for good reads and good deeds!

In a new twist on the traditional book club, Little Free Library's Action Book Club™ combines reading with community service projects.

Participants are invited to read books on timely topics, engage in lively discussions, and take part in meaningful—and fun—group service projects to benefit their communities. This is reading and social engagement at its best.

By sharing their stories online and inspiring others, Action Book Club members create a ripple effect of positive activity across the country and around the world.

GOOD READS AND GOOD DEEDS

- Launched in 2017, today there are more than 1,000 registered Action Book Clubs
- The Action Book Club is a partner of the New York Times' Learning Network
- There are Little Free Libraries across the United States and in 24 countries
- Each month, Action Book Clubs take part in exciting book giveaways from our recommended reading lists for kids, teens, and adults
- The Action Book Club has been featured in the New York Times, Parade, Martha Stewart Living, Bustle, Book Riot, and more

*Left to right: A middle school in Virginia read Refugee by Alan Gratz, then knit scarves to welcome refugees to their area. Third-graders in Cleveland read Look Where We Live by Scot Ritchie, then started a school recycling program. A women's book club in Alberta read The Readers of Broken Wheel Recommend by Katarina Bivald, then cooked meals for families at a children's hospital.*

HOW IT WORKS

1. Sign up your club

Members of your Action Book Club can be friends, classmates, family, coworkers, or even an existing book club.

2. Read a book

Select a book for your group to read from the Action Book Club's list of recommendations, or choose a book of your own. Read, enjoy, and discuss it.

3. Take action

Carry out a positive community service project with your group. Select an activity from our list or get creative.

4. Tell your story

After you've finished your project, tell us about it! By sharing your experience, you will inspire more good deeds across the country and around the world!

"I see my Action Book Club as a way to embrace my new commitment to take local action to improve our community."
