Chapter 4 Guests

Culturally Responsive Teaching and the Brain by Zaretta Hammond

Ryan Glaze | Tulsa, OK

Ryan is the principal at Jenks East Elementary School in Tulsa, OK, which was the recipient of LFL's 75,000th library celebration in 2018. Ryan shared, "Our LFL is located at the heart of our school campus near our flagpole and main office parking lot. We have been stewards since August of 2018 and have loved incorporating this into our Community School strategies to support our students, families, and friends! A fun fact is that after we launched our LFL, we developed several leadership teams of our students to redesign/decorate it and keep it maintained, clean, and well stocked. We also have incredibly warm memories of our time with Todd Bol during our launch as one of his last in-person visits at a location/school... He was a wonderful and loving man who couldn't get enough of our school community (and vice versa)!"

Talena Lachelle Queen | Patterson, NJ

Talena has pioneered 16 Little Free Libraries in city parks since 2017. She is ready to install 20 more LFLs in city parks. When she was nominated for a Todd H. Bol Award for Outstanding Achievement in 2019, Talena shared, "The Little Free Libraries in the Parks project has had a significant impact on my community. More people have adopted parks that have Little Free Libraries to help keep them clean. Children are often seen laying in the grass with books. I've learned of a family that was recently divorced and couldn't keep up with their preteen's thirst to read, financially, but LFL was able to help. The community and the LFL park project has partnered to transform ideas about reading and public spaces in the community."

Misty Morris | Salt Lake City, UT

Misty has been a steward for 5 years and has 5 LFLs in and around Salt Lake City, UT, and 1 in Butte, Montana. She is planning to install 4 more libraries in Salt Lake City this spring/summer! Misty shared, "A fun fact about my mobile LFL, my husband and I designed and built it from scratch having very little experience. I accidentally dumped a gallon of black paint on myself while painting it. We learned so much building it and we borrowed tools from our neighbors. The design fits Utah as the Beehive State and we will actually have our real bees in April."
